Blenheim House Cultural Facility – 17 Blenheim Street, Randwick

Dear neighbour,

We are writing to update you on plans for the reuse of historic Blenheim House, located at 17 Blenheim Street, Randwick.

The heritage listed property, which was built by Randwick's first Mayor, Simeon Pearce in 1848, will soon be restored and adaptively reused to become the first dedicated creative space for artists in Randwick City.

The Blenheim House Cultural Facility will return the building to community use, support local artists and performers and bring culture and excitement to our area.

The design proposal includes artist studios upstairs as well as a performance and exhibition venue downstairs.

The studios will provide much needed workspaces for local arts practitioners to develop their careers as artists. The range of artforms will include visual arts, writing, design and composition.

We will create a new pocket park at the front of the building, remove the current car port and open the space up to the street. This will create an inviting green oasis in a residential area that local residents can use all year round.

A development application will be submitted shortly for the works and neighbours will be notified about the application.

We are hosting a drop-in session where you can speak with Council officers and also go on a tour of the historic house lead by volunteers from the Friends of Blenheim House.

Blenheim House Drop-In Session
